DUNCAN MARSHALL, Manager.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1929.

The deputy minister of agriculture is reminding the farmers that in harvest they should remember the seedtime and not allow all the grain to be drawn from the country by the inducement of high prices. If prices are high now it is reasonable to suppose they will be higher still when the time comes to sow fall wheat next summer.

It is gratifying to learn that track-laying on the Government road between the G. T. P. and Winnipeg and the Lake ports will be completed this week. As the G. T. P. branch from the Transcontinental to the Lake ports is completed it will be possible to send a portion of the season's crop right through to the Lakes by the route. Even if the route is not in condition to handle the full quantity, it should be a valuable auxiliary to the existing roads, and go far to prevent a blockade.

Port Arthur is considering the idea of abolishing the city council and putting the administration of its affairs under a commission of experts. Presumably these would be directly responsible to the ratepayers. They would stand in reality outside of the city council, but composed of the active heads of city departments. The proposal is novel in this country, though Galveston, Texas, has had this form of government for some time and has prospered under it. Its success there, however, may have been due to unusually favorable conditions, or to unusual unanimity of popular opinion. In a city with as many and as varied problems as Edmonton, it is doubtful if the council could be abolished with any considerable advantage, or without very considerable disadvantage.

British journalism enjoys, and usually deserves, as high a reputation for clearness of argument as for beauty and force of expression. Not infrequently indeed Canadian journals are lectured for their inferiority in this respect, and are admonished to copy the style and imitate the methods of the London dailies. Such an advice must be coupled with a modifying clause, for there are many lapses from the high plane on which the London dailies move and have their being. The Standard is one of the few papers in this country which has had one of these lapses when it said: "Also, it must be confessed, many of us would hardly care to 'live at all unites we could make of the most modest share of those so-called superlatives. Chief amongst them, though not the worst, is the use of 'of' here, with and spirits." The confession is at least "open" and should therefore be good for the soul. If the Standard has one. Plainly, improvement is needed in that quarter. Whatever may be the defects of Canadian newspapers it is doubtful if a leader among them ever threw itself in the gutter in this manner and called upon all and sundry to come and wallow with it. The ideals of Canadian journalism may not be the best, but assuredly they are somewhat higher than the advocacy of wine-bibbing. Our newspapers may not always advance the highest argument, but certainly they do not hold the language of bacchanals in hope of promoting their party interests.

THE DEFENDER OF THE FAITH.
The Winnipeg Telegram disapproves very cordially the proposal of the Toronto News that a National Conservative convention be called. In fact the disapproval is more than cordial. It is warm with the spirit of decided disapproval. One might even say the Telegram is "woflsh" at the suggestion. The innocent cause of the outbreak was a suggestion by the News that as things do not seem to be very prosperous with the party, it might be well to try something new. It proposed the decidedly new expedient of a Conservative National convention, something we have not yet seen in Canada. To a Liberal, it is, of course, dead. But to a Conservative, it is a proposal to get together and talk things over should excite the animosity of any well-wisher of the party. But it does. The Telegram promptly rises and puts its veto on the scheme. It gives one reason for doing so. The News, more correctly, that the West did not want to have much use for the party, and urged that a convention might enable the party to bring its policy more into alignment with Western views.

It is at this suggestion of shifting the scene that the Telegram takes umbrage. It says quite pointedly: "With all due deference to the News, the West does not greatly require a 'convention of any political party to 'expound, convey or ratify its allegiance to any particular policy. Its influence in the state is sufficiently great to obviate the necessity of any such endorsement, and it is becoming greater every day.'"

There is at least clearness in the Telegram's reasoning. The party, it says, must take its chances in the West as the party, unchanged and changeable, the same yesterday, the day before and forever. The party, it says, has "Always maintained a national destiny with which we do not wish to be allowed to interfere." The national "policy" must have been from the memory for some time. The declaration, however, is sufficiently clear: The West must take the party as it finds it, as it has always found it, and the West will not be allowed to "interfere" with it.

For the further enlightenment of the News, the Telegram informs it that "Many of the questions in the national 'policy' which enter into national politics are 'by the West considered purely 'Questions of administration which in the West are considered vital, may 'in the east, be considered unimportant, and because they affect the West 'alone.' Which, in specific language, means that the West is getting good administration, and that while it is getting good administration it is not likely to take much stock in the policy of the Opposition. In which there are some strong elements of truth.

To put its meaning beyond doubt, the Telegram reiterates: "Every Conservative rests truly, confidently, and 'certainly in the national ideal which 'is the mainstay and stay of his 'party.' Hereafter there need be no doubt as to what the Opposition stands for. Its ideal is the national 'unity' embodied in its historic accomplishments. We have it on the authority of its leading newspaper exponent in the West, begging the pardon of the Calgary Herald. Why the Telegram substituted 'unity' for 'policy' in the description of the ideal, may perhaps be guessed. But the substitution is unimportant and will deceive no one. It means the same thing. The national 'unity' which is the Opposition ideal, stands written in the charters and accomplishments of the national 'policy.' That is clear. It is also undoubtedly true.

Why the war in the camp? And even so innocent-looking a matter as the proposal of a National convention? Several reasons suggest themselves. The Telegram, with the Toronto Mail, and some others of the older papers of the party, do not particularly relish the party activity of the News. That journal has for many months steadily fostered the position of leader of the squadron, though it still displays the banner of independence at the peak. However welcome its assistance may be, it gives any real assistance, the older craft do not view with pleasure the prospect of having to give precedence to the newcomer. The Telegram's rebuke is proof that they do not intend to do so either. It even drops the hint that any attempt to alter the former position, or to change the plan of campaign, will be followed by "rebellion," and that the dissatisfied ones will "quickly find a new organization to embody and represent the 'old' ideal."

The Telegram, too, is the particular and peculiar, very peculiar, exponent of the views, and apologist for the deeds, of the Roblin government. That government includes, beside the Premier, a couple of gentlemen who are credited with a willingness to shine in a broader sphere. To that end they consider an overhauling of the party program, and a revision of the party's policy necessary. When Mr. Roblin began his tour a couple of years ago they waited on him and said so. But the chief would have none of it. He was king, and while he was king was to be the sole dictator of the party policy. The rebuff was not pleasant to the bumptious statements of Mani-to, who wanted to inject the heresy of democracy into the ancient vessel of authority. From the Telegram's present stand it seems they have described to give Mr. Roblin enough of his own medicine. If he would not call a convention when they wanted one, they will not now allow him to call a convention at the behest of the Toronto News.

Whatever the motive of its assault on the younger brother, it must be admitted the Telegram is the better for it. A National Conservative convention has not yet been held in this country. Nor will it be held, unless and until the party is prepared to part with its oldest and proudest tradition. That tradition is the respect for authority, the regard for order, the reverence of antiquity. Between this and the spirit of democracy there is no affinity and can be no trace. They are contrary and contradictory ideas. One cannot hold the tenets of absolutism and the doctrine of republicanism at the same time. He must choose to the one and abandon the other. The Telegram makes its choice for the traditions, and against innovation. Whatever its motive, it must be admitted consistent. And its consistency in the case seems to be equalled by its authority. As the spokesman of the Roblin Government it is the head bugler of the party in the West. It has declared against a National convention. The convention movement is dead.

COSTLY FIRE IN WINNIPEG.

Apartment Houses Destroyed in Foreign Section.
At Winnipeg, Sept. 26—Fire broke out at 11 Sunday morning in an apartment house on Selkirk avenue and before it was checked three stories were completely gutted, and almost the entire contents were lost. The estimated loss is $10,000. The fire was started by some unknown cause in a shed at the rear of the house. The fire was in the heart of the foreign settlement and it was some minutes before anyone thought of turning on an alarm, giving the flames an immense head. The fire finally still further hampered by being under the high pressure system, having to rely on the domestic pressure.

600 Foot Dock at Port Arthur.
Port Arthur, Ont., Sept. 26—A construction outfit left Saturday for the head of Flinder Bay, 22 miles distant, to construct the six hundred foot dock for the Dominion Bessmer Ore Company, who intend to have it ready in time to ship at least ten thousand tons of ore to Dunbar, Penna., this season.

Showing the New Fall Goods

READY for Fall and Winter with the largest and finest stock we have ever shown, with double the choice and variety, with the best value we have ever offered our customers. Buying, as we do, a great many lines direct from the mills and factories of the Old Country, we are in an unequalled position to secure the newest and best, and at right prices. And every saving made is promptly passed on to our customers in better goods at the same price other stores get for an inferior article. A visit will convince you that it is in your own interest to do your Fall and Winter shopping here.

A Dress Skirt at $5.50

For $5.50 we show a 7 gored skirt of fine coating serge, with small bias folds of self, extending from front to side seams on either side, piped with blue, trimmed with satin covered buttons. Colors, black, navy and brown. USE SIZE - 28-30

At $8.00 we show a very dressy skirt of fine chiffon panama, has a lot center seam about 12 inches down, then opens out into an inverted pleat, has a cluster of three pleats on each side seam, trimmed round buttons with rows of Duchess satin continued up either side in front.

Showing the New Dress Goods

If your costume comes from the Johnstone Walker Company, the costume is correct.

Our showing of the new fall dress goods is the admiration of every customer, embracing as it does the very newest and latest cloths for the season.

STRIPE EFFECTS PREDOMINATE and we are showing an immense range in plain and satin finished effects in all the new shades and at any price, per yard 50c to $2.50
